

BUILDING LEGENDS

SKILLS WORKSHOPS FOR EMERGING CONSTRUCTION MANAGERS

Building Legends is a New Zealand Institute of Building (NZIOB) training programme comprising a suite of workshops presented by today's industry legends, passing on their skills and experience to create a pool of highly skilled construction managers, who will in turn become tomorrow's industry legends.

The seed for Building Legends was created in November 2017 with a sell-out event involving industry legend, Warren Hollings (MNZIOB), who provided an overview of the key elements from his 2016 book, 'Stand and Deliver - Leadership and the Power of Teamwork'. A review of Warren's book suggested that the publication was "destined to become the modern project manager's go-to text for strategy, planning and harnessing the power of teamwork to achieve outstanding results".

The positive feedback provided by those attending the Warren Hollings event, reinforced the NZIOB's view that there is a high level of interest from the younger generation of Construction Managers to be exposed to experienced industry figures like Warren, whom can provide them with relevant and insightful tools and techniques to grow their own capability.

With Building Legends, the NZIOB is providing training designed to accelerate the development of the next generation of New Zealand's Construction Managers. Each workshop topic will be delivered by an experienced construction practitioner who is viewed as being an expert on the topic.

Delivery mode

Each workshop will comprise two to three sessions, with each session being approximately three hours in duration. They are scheduled mid-week, with a spacing of a fortnight between sessions, so that participants can trial their learnings on their respective sites and report back to the group on the results.
